My time at Dominican further strengthened my desire to use my skills to benefit a mission-driven organization. As a marketer, I am able to put my work into the context of supporting an organization that focuses on the health and wellbeing of animals and people.

I find myself thinking about how my future work can impact others in a positive way.

This was a tough question to answer. I was already a devout committed catholic ministry professional when I got accepted to dominican, so I can't really say that Dominican increased my commitment to these areas.

As a remote student I really just took my classes and moved along.

My daughter is currently a freshman living on campus she loves it!

The MBA/RD program is so unique and I feel that makes Dominican stand out among options.

Most of the teachers were very engaged and committed to helping, but the courses were riddled with grading errors, and one of the professors didn't respond to emails for months. When the courses are fully remote, it's important to have professors who are even more engaged than they would be in-person or else it feels like we're teaching ourselves from the books alone.

I was an undergrad at DU (then Rosary College), then taught part-time when earning my PhD (and later full-time as a tenured faculty member in Psychology), and have taught as a part-time faculty member since expanding my clinical practice (now a large group with multiple locations).

I always and most enthusiastically recommend DU to everyone -- to consider being a student, faculty member, or staff member!
