9:00 a.m. Opening Plenary

10:00 a.m. Concurrent Sessions I

A. Our Dreams for Dominican: University Trustees Reflect

Board of Trustees

Strategic planning, fiduciary responsibility, fidelity to mission are all hallmarks of the life of a university trustee. What dreams do our trustees have for Dominican? How does their work make that dream come to life? What perspectives do they bring from their professional experiences to their service as trustees? Join some members of the University Board of Trustees to learn about what they dream and do for love of Dominican.

B. The Truth is, Food is a Human Right

Danielle Cahalan, Amelia Discher, Alyssa Lendy

As human beings, we require food to function and think properly. For students, interns, and staff members, this means consuming a nutrient-dense, calorically appropriate diet. Unfortunately, not everyone can afford or has access to these types of foods, or any food for that matter. In the past year, student hunger on campus has been an increasingly noticeable problem, one that is alarming and difficult to overlook. Numerous student and faculty-led meetings have convened in an attempt to ensure food is being provided to those in need, but we need your help to raise awareness and advocate for these efforts. What we know, on a fundamental level, is that food is human right. Through the mission of Caritas Veritas, we are striving to live in this truth and spread love through pathways that will make a lasting impact and difference in others lives. Please join us to learn more about food insecurity on college campuses and what the Student Nutrition and Dietetics Association (SNDA) is doing to progress in living this truth of basic human needs.
C. Constructions of Race and Equity in Schools: Teachers and School Social Workers as Nepantleras and Border Crossers

Leticia Villarreal Sosa

Latinx youth continue to be underrepresented in honors courses, Advanced Placement courses, and gifted programs while they are overrepresented in discipline referrals, dropout rates, grade retention, and special education (Noguera, 2008). Educators, some by necessity and some by choice, become nepantleras in the process of mediating their own or their students’ cultural and psychological borders (Reza-López, Huerta Charles, & Reyes, 2014). This paper explores the degree to which school social workers and teachers act as nepantleras, and the various constraints they face in attempting to serve immigrant and Latinx students.

In Pursuit of Truth: The Lived Experiences of Gay, Male Alumni of Catholic Colleges and Universities

Todd Kleine

When identity, faith, religion and community intersect on a college campus, what truths emerge at the cross roads? What does dialogue look like when both pleasant and tough truths emerge? Based on the outcomes of a year-long, phenomenological dissertation, this session explores how gay men perceive their experiences of attending a Catholic university.

D. Social Justice in Higher Education: Using Contemplative Pedagogy to Build Inclusive and Compassionate Learning Communities

Jane Cho, Gilmer Cook, Joyce Shim, Melissa Murphy Thompson

Genuine dialogue about diversity, discrimination and oppression can be challenging for both students and educators. This panel presentation will engage participants in how the use of mindfulness can be applied in higher education, allowing all members of a learning community to explore their lived experiences with dignity and compassion. The panel will then present their successes and failures in working to unlearn oppression and how they bring the results of this exploration to the learning communities they lead.

E. Laudato Si’ Four Years Later: Are We Caring for Our Common Home?

Sheila Bauer Gatsos, Rachel Hart Winter, Tim Milinovich, Ellen McManus

This panel will discuss how the climate outlook has changed since Laudato Si’ was published in 2015, how the global political situation has made both climate action and social action more difficult, and how worldwide movements have begun taking action in the face of these challenges. We will also explore with the audience how Dominican might more fully embody the principles of the Pope’s encyclical.
F. Truth and Love in Medical Mission Trips

Katlyn Kappel, Lauren Nelson, Taylor Olson, Jamie Rawl

A round table discussion on “Truth and Love in Medical Mission Trips”. We explore the benefits, risks and ethical implications of mission trips, impacting the volunteers and recipients alike.

G. BSB’s Rapid Research Relay

Lisa M. Amoroso, David Aron, Molly Burke, Daniel Condon, Khalid Razaki, Brooke Reavey, John Vail, K.R. Vishwanath

Join Brennan School of Business faculty as they “run” for five minutes and then “pass the baton” to the next presenter for a fast-paced session. Each presenter will take exactly 5 minutes (and not a second more) to share the key points or findings from their research that they find most compelling, or perhaps they will share an inherent tension or dilemma they have faced within their area of research, or last they might share an aspect or finding of their work that has deeply impacted them as individuals. Ready. Set. Go.

H. Working on a Mystery, Going Wherever it Leads

Tim Cook, Megan Chesney, Susan Hebble, Keegan Lannon

This workshop explores the journey four Dominican University instructors have taken on their pursuit of truth. These journeys were not always linear, and some lead down dead ends or to unexpected discoveries, but each of the instructors followed their passions to chase down their dreams.

11:15 a.m. Concurrent Sessions II

A. Lunch Seating #1

B. Searching for Words and Actions to Ease Suffering

Michelle Allen, Sarah Anderson, Yesenia Rodriguez, Jonathan Uebelhor

As friends, family members and healthcare staff we sometimes struggle in finding the right thing to say to individuals as they approach the end of life. This panel, composed of faculty and students will discuss what measures we can take to ease the suffering of these individuals and their loved ones with the understanding that these words and actions will have a lasting impact on all those involved.
C. Fall Down Seven Times, Get Up Eight: Lessons in Persistence from Aikido

Dianne R. Costanzo

Aikido, a Japanese martial art shows that failure (or falling) is not separate from success. In the senior seminar, “Aikido as Contemplation,” students learn to connect Aristotle’s ethics with Aikido where they learn that virtue or excellence begins with choosing the good. We can choose to let setbacks defeat us or we can choose to learn from them and use setbacks as a lesson. Join us for this interactive presentation.

D. Bearing Witness: Making Change Happen

Jada Coleman, Sheila Radford-Hill, Kiese Ray

A university-wide commitment to diversity, equity, inclusion and social justice means that everyone on campus needs to live and work effectively in a multicultural, multilingual, intergenerational, interfaith and geographically diverse population. We need to be intentional about learning how to work together across differences in class, sexual orientation, perspectives, viewpoints, and lived experiences. Caritas and Veritas invites us to bear witness to our successes as a more equitable campus even as we explore places where we have fallen short. The workshop will provide an opportunity to have participant voices heard and develop feedback for the President's Advisory Council on Diversity, Equity and Inclusion, building a just and humane campus.

E. Love Knows No Border: “Buscando Vida” & Learning from Immigrants, Refugees, Asylum Seekers and Service Providers

Sister Peggy Ryan, OP, Suhad Tabahi

This workshop will address the current sociopolitical climate regarding immigrant, refugee and asylum seekers' rights by sharing our first-hand experience learning from and working with our brothers and sisters across the border in Chula Vista/Tijuana and El Paso/Ciudad Juarez. The “walls” of internalized racial oppression and internalized racial superiority within will be explored and used to discuss the similarities between “Al-Jidjar” in Palestine and “The Wall” on the U.S./Mexico border. We welcome you to take this journey with us in better understanding what it means to “buscando vida” and fight for social justice.

F. A View from the Students’ Seats: Are Peer Teaching Observations a Nightmare or a Dream?

Ben Freville, Kim Garrett, Adrian Kok, Stacy Kowalczyk, Susan McDonough, Joyce Shim

Six faculty members in Education, Information Studies, and Social Work within the College of Applied Social Sciences (CASS) will present 6 ignite-talks about their experiences participating in faculty lead peer observations. Hear and see what the CASS faculty community is doing to move forward to create a more humane and just work environment and academic institution for its students, staff, and faculty. Achievements made, lessons learned, and emerging hopes will be shared.
G. Caritas as Care for Creation for All: Sustainability at Sinsinawa, Dominican University, and Beyond

Kathryn Brien, Monica Halloran, Mary Sadofsky

The Sinsinawa Sisters have given Dominican a powerful legacy not only in their ongoing struggles for social justice but also in their 2016 Land Stewardship Plan, their 2018 Corporate Stance on Climate Change, and their ongoing Care for Creation initiatives. The audience will be invited to discuss what they think it means to Care for Creation and what future actions can be collectively taken.

H. Food for Thought: How does where you live predict the availability of healthy food and overall health?

Sarah D. Jones, Maureen Luschen, Dajana Marin, Nicole Stewart

How does the prevalence of health and disease correlate with the availability of healthy food within a neighborhood? Well, join the Community Nutrition students as they describe their journey to answer this question in relation to the very diverse neighborhoods within Chicago.

I. 50 Years Pursuing The Principles Of Nonviolence Guided By The Values Of Veritas/ Caritas

Hugh McElwain

A personal story in the pursuit of the principles of nonviolence (based particularly on the teachings and actions of Gandhi and King.) The journey traverses three historical moments over the past half century. First, the Civil Rights movements in the ‘60’s; second, the war years (Vietnam, Gulf, Iraq); and, finally, in modern times, the gradual/ violent destruction of Earth through ecological mismanagement.

Lessons Learned from Uganda: Improving Access to Services by Utilizing Community Equity

Tanya Burgess

Our community participatory research in Uganda shed light on how body equity is used in a resource-poor but culturally rich environment to sustain life. This session will share findings from that research, and draw parallels to U.S. culture. Implications for improving access to services for older adults through building community equity will be discussed.
12:30 p.m. Concurrent Sessions III

A. Lunch Seating #2

B. Reimagining the Classroom Community: Lectio Divina as a Tool for Transforming Education
Josephine Sarvis, Penny Silvers, Debra Vinci-Minogue

In this session, we will provide examples of integrating the creative processes of the 4-step Lectio Divina methods appropriate for higher education classrooms. Participants in this embodied and experiential session will, in John Dewey’s words, “learn by doing” to appreciate its effectiveness and become aware of alternative modalities for inner growth through reflective and intellectual inquiry.

C. The Perils of Veritas in Action: Telling the Truth about Climate Change
Gerald Gulley, Scott Kreher, Ellen McManus, Tama Weisman, Richard Woods, OP

The truths about climate change are not easy to hear and therefore not easy to tell. This panel will explore three aspects of this difficult truth-telling: the far-reaching and well-funded campaign to obscure the facts about the changing climate; the reluctance of the government, the media, and educational institutions to face what climate change means for our future; and the interconnectedness between climate policies and social justice. The panelists will invite audience discussion about how these deeply intertwined problems can be faced together.

D. Dreaming of Traveling: Doing Study Abroad at Dominican University, Córdoba, a Case Study
Gema Ortega, Lisa Petrov

Dominican University has a large percentage of students personally connected to the world through histories of “traveling” that have to do with colonialism, economic migration, forced displacement, and/or diaspora. As faculty leaders of study abroad, we travel with students taking into account their need to (re)connect with their cultural legacies while raising critical and transcultural awareness of their positionalities as US residents. Our panel will focus on DU’s recent study abroad program to Córdoba and other cities connected to the al-Andalus, in modern Andalucía (Spain) and Morocco, as a case study that focuses on global, historical, and critical awareness, comparative cultural perspectives, and ethno-relativism through experiential pedagogy abroad.
E. Millennial Branding: Don't Stop Me Now

David Aron, Brooke Schantz Fosco

Developing a personal brand in a social media world doesn’t have to be a challenge! Join us to learn how to Play the Game and stay in Good Company while creating your Millennial Brand. Participants will leave singing Don’t Stop Me Now after learning about points of parity, points of difference, and determinant variables.

F. Human Rights, Environmental Justice, and the Migration Crisis: The Impact of Globalization/Neoliberal Capitalism on Mayan Communities

Jane Cho, Margaret Johnson, Mary Kwasny, Jenny Morales, Tania Roman, Natalie Sanchez

Migration from Guatemala to the U.S. began on a large scale in an attempt to escape the 36-year civil war, and continues today in a context of corruption, extreme inequality, land displacement, and continued human rights. Students of the School of Social Work, who engaged in an immersive 2-week trip to Guatemala, will share the history and current issues threatening the survival and livelihood of the Guatemalan people.

G. What Causes Recurring Financial Crises?

Robert Pickert, Jr.

and

The Art of Living: The Sisters of Sinsinawa and Their Art

Collette Chucherko, Steven Szegedi

How many Sinsinawan Sister artists can you name? Have an interest in central Italy? Allow Dominican’s Archivist, Steven Szegedi, to introduce you to a dozen or so Sister artists, come spend some time with their original art, and learn about Rosary’s 1948-1985 Italian fine arts school, Villa Schifanoia.
1:45 p.m. Concurrent Session IV

A. TheDream.US

Carlos Benitez, Lisset Diaz, Don Graham, Diana Hernandez, Yessenia Hernandez

In this panel presentation, Dominican student recipients of scholarships from TheDream.US share their stories on the challenges they encountered in gaining access to and navigating college as well as about the benefits of the scholarship, the resources, and the education that they are obtaining. The co-founder of TheDream.US and 2019 Bradford-O’Neill Medallion recipient, Don Graham, will join us to share the values and opportunities that TheDream.US has created for their DACA scholars throughout the country.

B. You’ve Gotta Do Something: Faithful Humanity In Light Of And Not In Spite Of Your Social Location – Lessons from Catholic Relief Services

Luis Beteta, Liz Collier, John DeCostanza

Our unique social locations shape the ways that we pursue truth, love others, and perceive and achieve success and failure on the road from dreaming to doing. Speaking from their own professional and personal experiences, Luis Beteta, a Catholic Relief Services partner and Dominican University parent, and Drs. Collier and DeCostanza will explore the ways that the call to doing is grounded in the dignity of our neighbors, even and especially those on the other side of the world. Using the work of Catholic Relief Services as a lens for theological reflection, Beteta, Collier and DeCostanza will invite those gathered into a dialogue about faithful humanity probing the possibilities of solidarity, proximity, and local action in a time of global disruption, xenophobia, and isolation.

C. Why Headlines are Misleading: A Journalist’s Reflections on Missed Opportunities

Mary Payne

How do journalists find and report the truth? What is the role of journalism and journalists in our country and culture today? With the breakneck pace of the news cycle, how does a reporter keep up and maintain integrity? An alumna of Dominican University's journalism program will share stories of her own work embracing the rigor of the news cycle and how she views certain cases of media coverage.

Whose 'Truth' Are We Talking About? Universities in the Age of Alternative Facts, Fake News and Conflicting Perceptions

Bill Crowley

This session considers how the truth can be attacked in numerous ways including: social networking echo chambers, heuristics and biases, propaganda and the proliferation of fake news. The possible roles for us - faculty, staff, and students -- in support of a broader identification and provision of validated facts at a time of often unreliable electronic information is at the heart of this session.
D. An Intergenerational Activity - Bringing Students and Elders Together at an Adult Day Center

Julie Bach, Rose Ann Mathai

As Baby Boomers continue to reach the age of 65 and older in large numbers, how do we help prepare our students to compassionately work with elders in their future careers? As ageism continues in the United States resulting in students' hesitation to work with elders, intergenerational activities increase the comfort that students experience when interacting with elders. Learn about an activity that brought undergraduate students together with elders at an Adult Day Center to discuss nutrition and caregiving resources.

E. Let Us Sustain Our Common Home

Kathryn Brien, Joann Dickenson, Yasemin Ersun-Hallsby, Brent Friesen

Our panel will provide a summary of the current issues that are at hand regarding environmental sustainability and preservation. We will then offer further insights into the steps that can be taken by further educating our general population with factual information, and steps to take to make every effort count on helping our common home to sustain us!

F. Dominic’s Dream Today: The Living Legacy of the Dominican Family

Sister Marie Michelle Hackett, OP, Giselle Magana, Sister Rhonda Miska, OP, Sister Janet Welsh, OP

The Mary Nona McGreal, OP Center serves as a resource and research center for Dominican historical studies. It holds over 20 different archives from Dominican collaborative endeavors. Each collection is filled with countless documents and those papers tell stories about real people. The documents reveal how people search for truth and how love drives them to do what they do. Today we will meet three real people who actually live the stories that the documents reveal.

3:15 p.m. Academic Convocation

Lund Auditorium

The Dominican University community will gather together to reaffirm its shared commitment to academic excellence, social justice, caritas and veritas. We will honor Professor Tina Taylor-Ritzler with the Sr. Mary Clemente Davlin Diversity Leadership Award. In addition, we will present Donald E. Graham, former publisher of the Washington Post and founder of TheDream.US, with the Bradford-O’Neill Medallion for Social Justice.
